The Massacre of Capt. Gunnison.

We have heretofore given accounts of the mas acre of Captain Gunnison and his surveying party. The following account, which we copy from the Philadelphia Bulletin, contains some inormation of interest which we have not seen lsewhere. It speaks particularly of Mr. Richard H. Kern, a gentleman of high attainments, who was connected professionally with the party.

H. Kern, a gentleman of high attainments, who was connected professionally with the party.

"The report of the massacre of Capt. Gunnison, of the army, and a number of his gallant party engaged on a survey through the country of the Utah Indians, comes, unhappily, in too direct and authentic a shape to leave any hope of its being incorrect. There is none of the appearance of improbability about it that surrounded the similar story about Captain Marcy, and sustained the hopes of his friends until his safety was established. The first account of it that we have is directly from the governor of Utah, who has employed such limited means as were in his power to rescue the survivors and punish the savages.

"The expedition commanded by Captain Gunnison was sent out to survey a route for a Pacific railroad, which was recommended by Senator Gwin last winter. The route was that of Mr. Richard H. Kern, formerly of Philadelphia, who received an appointment as commander of the topographical party, and who has fallen also among the victims of savage cruelty. Mr. Kern was one of the most daring, intelligent, experienced, and cultivated pioneers of our vast western wilds. He had several times crossed the continent, and was on Fremont's last ill-fated expedition, in which his brother, Benjamin Kern, was killed by hostile Indians. Both these gentlemen were unsurpassed in their professions. Richard, whose sad fate is now mourned by his friends, was a very superior draughtsman, a thorough scholar, an accomplished linguist, and gifted with that sagacity and energy which are so invaluable to those who lead a mountain and frontier life. Had he lived, he would doubtless have rendered good service to the country.

"We have no information in reference to the other victims of this calamity; but as such parties are always composed of picked men, there have probably been others massacred equally gifted and equally beloved. The cause of the disaster lies in that mistaken policy so long pursued by our government, of sending off small squads

"We shall be surprised if the other exploring "We shall be surprised if the other exploring expeditions, escape similar outrages, and we trust that the bitter lesson given in this tragedy may be the means of introducing a new system. It will not do merely to punish the perpetrators of this last massacre. That will not restore the victims, though it may terrify the murderers. But it should be a fixed rule to send out a military force, of at least several hundred men, with every exploring party, armed so as to set at defance the predatory bands of savages who make the passage to the Pacific a gauntlet of death.

The following extract is from a letter from a so of Captain M. Snyder, of this city, (aged 18 years, to his father. It was written three days after the massacre.

I wish you would write to Mrs. W at Philadelphia, and give her all the particulars and tell her that I shall attend to Mr. Kern's e fects, public and private. I cannot write much as my mind is too unsettled. As soon as I arrive at the Salt Lake I will give you a more particular account. Give my love to all the family and friends.

Mr. K's neck, this being the only thing the Indians left upon his person. The night before he left he told me, if he did not return, how to dispose of his books and other articles. His books and paints he wished me to give to his brother N., (now in the Arctic expedition,) and his money to his sister, It seems as if every man who was along with him had a presentiment of what was to happen. The morning Mr. Kern left he bid me 'good bye,' saying he should not see me agaih. A tear fell from his eye at the time.

The Railroad war at Erie.-On the night of The Railroad war at Erie.—On the night of the 9th instant, when the western train arrived at Harbor Creek, a few miles west of Erie, it was compelled to stop, in consequence of the railroad bridge being on fire and fast tending to destruction. Upon investigation the passengers found that for the distance of seven miles the track had been torn completely up, and the rails and sleepers dragged for some distance from the line of the road, and at each crossing of the turnnile, the dragged for some distance from the line of the road, and at each crossing of the turnpike the ground had been ploughed up and scraped off, so as to materially alter the grade. Immense trains of cars had collected on each side of the town, unable to proceed, in consequence of the depredations above mentioned, and the mails and other articles which had been entrusted to the company, to convey between Buffalo and Cleveland, were detained at this point. The presented to the to convey between Buffalo and Cleveland, were detained at this point. The passengers of the train above mentioned, when they ascertained how matters stood in the locality where they were thus prevented from pursuing their journey, called an indignation meeting, and passed a series of resolutions, which severely condemned the authorities and citizens of Eric, for their lawless proceedties and citizens of Erie, for their lawless proceedings, and called upon the government to put a stop to the depredations, which, if allowed to proceed, must end in some frightful catastrophe. We have room only for the following, which were among the resolutions passed:

*Resolved, That the citizens of every State in this Union should feel a deep interest in having the miscreants of Erie visited with the vengeance of the law, in such terrific form as will forever deter them, or any like people, if such like can be found, from similar acts of outrage.

Resolved, That owing to the lawlessness of the population, who seem to be encouraged by the mayor, they have deemed it their policy to wantonly destroy the railroad bridges and track, thereby causing great inconvenience and suffering to passengers, exposed to the night air, besides extra expenses, we deem it our duty to caution all persons going east or west, from using any road connected with Erie, until such time as the arrangements shall be perfected for a safe and quick passage as heretofore advertised. And further Resolved, That the railroad company justly deserves great censure for not forwarning the public of the damage done to the road, and, at least, in not properly caring for the passengers who entrusted themselves to their care.

The Late New York Fire. The Herald of Monday, speaking of the burning of Harpers' establishment, says:

The Harald of Monday, speaking of the burning of Harpers' establishment, says:

Thousands visited the scene of disaster yesterday. From early in the moraing till late in the might there was one constant crowd in Cliff street, Franklin square, and the other streets near by. On the site of Harpers' printing house, yesterday, nothing was left standing but one tall chimney, which looked like a monument among the ruins. The firemen had pushed over all the other walls, to prevent accident from the falling. During the day a few workmen were engaged getting out the safes, which were buried beneath the huge hills of bricks. The entire force of the fourth ward police were constantly on duty yesterday, guarding the premises against the hordes of thieves prowling about such places in search of valuables. We understand that, in spite of the vigilance of the police, some portions of printing presses, exhaumed books, &c., had been carried off.

The following are the particulars as to the loss of the Messrs. Harpers, and the insurance upon their property. Their entire loss of buildings, stock, engines, &c., is estimated at $500,000. In the establishment were thirty-three large power presses, and eleven hydraulic presses, besides various hand-presses and other appuratus for publishing. The loss of the sheets in the folding-room, bound, trimmed and ready for the covers. The Messrs. Harpers are insured for only about $250,000. Of this, $20,000 is insured in an English company, who have an agent in Boston, and the rest is distributed among all the principal companies in the city and country, none of the policies exceeding $5,000.

The most valuable property of the establishment, the stereotyped plates, we understand, are in a good state of preservation. These plates are valued at $400,000, and are not included in the above estimate of $500,000. This property was stowed away in valus, extending under the side, and were blocked up from the fire by the falling of the walls.

From the following card, it will be seen that but little de appeared as volunteer counsel for the prisoner, whose parents are very poor, who desired that Mr. J. should appear on behalf of their child. From the Dispatch we learn that the prisoner was in the employ of Mr. Dearing as mail carrier, and frankly confessed having purloined a letter containing two halves of two one hundred dollar notes, which was mailed by Mr. Davis at Oak Level post office was mailed by Mr. Davis at Oak Level post office to a house in New York. Without giving the evidence in detail, we will endeavor to furnish its substance. On reaching Bush's office, the prisoner says, the postmaster at that place assorted the mail, and coming to the letter containing the pieces of bank notes, remarked that it contained money. Hearing this, he watched an opportunity, and when the postmaster turned his back, he seized upon and concealed it. On arriving at the Liberty post office, in Bedford county, the accused asked for a wafer, and in the presence of Mr. Parker, the postmaster, endeavored to put the pieces together, but they would not fit. Mr. Parker, on seeing what he was attempting to do, went to him, took possession of the parts of notes, and asked John where he obtained them. The reply was that his father gave them to him. This Mr. P. doubted, and in a subsequent conversation the little tellow made a clean breast of the whole affair, frankly admitting that he had taken them from the mail.

Mr. Gregory merely read the law, and explaine to the jury their duty. He regretted that there was not a shadow of doubt as to the guilt of the accused, for he felt assured that it would be no less painful to the jury than to himself to see a mere child sent to the State prison. Cause of the late Fire in New York.—
It has been heretofore stated that the burning of the Harpers' establishment was caused by the bursting of their boiler; but we find in the New York Times that the fire arose from a lighted match being carelessly thrown by a mechanic into a vat of camphine, used for cleaning the ink fountains of the presses. The plumber, to whose care lessness the fire is attributed, supposed the camphene to be water.

PERSONS at a distance, addressing the Managers, can confidently rely on having their orders for tickets in the Maryland Lotteries promptly filled.

Bank notes on any solvent bank in the United States received at par for tickets.

Bonds, to a heavy amount, are deposited with the State to secure the payment of prizes. Drawings conducted in public, under the superintendence of the State Lottery Commissioner.

We would call your attention to the following splendid Lotteries, to be drawn under our management, during the month of December. Any orders you may favor us with will receive prompt attention, and be considered strictly confidential.

The Managers' Official Scheme is always sent from the Managers' Office, with all the tickets ordered, and the printed official drawing certified to by the State Lottery Commissioner, will be sent same day, after the drawing of the lottery is over.

All prizes sold at the Managers' Office are cashed immediately after the drawing.

These Lotteries will be drawn each Saturday of the month, and we would suggest to correspondents the propriety of sending their favors in the early part of the week. Should an order be received too late for the Lottery of one week the amount enclosed will either be invested in that of the succeeding week, or returned to the correspondents, according to their wish.
